John Wahinemaikai did not agree with Meheula. He held that bankers were indirectly benefitted by the government, as the planters aid the bankers. The same is true of men in other vocations in life.

David Ai seconded Meheula's arguments. He believed that an income tax would fall on people unfairly, as some received more benefits than others.

The whole discussion was listened to with great attention by the audience. The delivery of the boys was excellent.

The school chorus then sang the Mermaid song, in a manner that only Kamehameha boys can sing. K. Kanehe read, in a very clear voice, an excellent composition entitled, "Homes for Hawaiians." The speakers gave much promise of their future. They were all young men of unquestionable merit. Kamehameha song was then rendered by the school chorus, which was loudly applauded.

Moses Kauwe was the "funny man" of the class and the clasprophet. Some of his prophesies were very amusing, and if all his predictions shall come to pass some will enjoy happiness, while others will experience life-long misery.
